

Putting the Pieces Back Together!

Sexual violence can shatter a person's world, and flashbacks of reliving this awful experience can come from out of nowhere. Some victims find it even difficult to look at themselves in a mirror because of the shame and pain that simply does not go away. But help is available, and while the horrible memory cannot be erased, the pieces can be put back together to eventually help the victim move on with life.

For your sake and others around you, should you ever be a victim of sexual violence at ADJC, do not shut down or keep it inside. Come see staff immediately for help, and trust us to stop those who sexually violate you or others around you.
